the seasons.

Water is a definite feature of this property, with Cob-O-Corn Creek running through the farm, plus a large spring fed dam, two bores and a 55,000 Litre rainwater storage tank.

The 67-acres is 50% arable and has rich alluvial creek flats on either side of the creek suitable for cropping or growing pasture. It then gently lifts to soft basalt ridges that have been planted with native hardwood timbers, including iron bark, tallowwood and lemon scented gum which provides a koala highway through the property. The timber has been planted so that it doesn't adversely affect the grazing potential of the paddocks and gives the house and studio plenty of privacy.

The property has been carrying 30 head of cattle and is fenced into 3 main grazing paddocks with all fences in excellent condition.

If you are looking for a property with all the hard work done, this one has your name on it.
